- your existing holding (if any) will be estimated by reference to NEXTDC's beneficial register on Wednesday, 22 April 2026 which shows historical holdings as at that date and may not be up to date. There will be no verification or reconciliation of the holdings as shown in the historical beneficial register and, accordingly, this may not truly reflect your actual holding. NEXTDC and the Joint Lead Managers do not have any obligation to reconcile assumed holdings (eg for recent trading or swap positions) when determining allocations. If you do not reside in a permitted Entitlement Offer jurisdiction for the relevant tranche of the Entitlement Offer, you will not be able to participate in that tranche of the Entitlement Offer;
- NEXTDC reserves the right to withdraw or vary the timetable for the Entitlement Offer without notice, including by closing the Entitlement Offer early, withdrawing the Entitlement Offer entirely or extending the Entitlement Offer closing time (generally or for particular investor(s)) in its absolute discretion (but has no obligation to do so), without recourse to it or notice to you. Furthermore, communications that a transaction is "covered" (ie aggregate demand indications exceed the amount of the security offered) are not an assurance that the transaction will be fully distributed;
- the Joint Lead Managers are full service securities firms and, along with their respective affiliates, are engaged in various activities, including underwriting, lending and financing, securities trading, financial advisory services, investment management, principal investment, research, financing and brokerage activities and financial planning and benefits counselling, risk management, hedging and other financial and non-financial activities and services for various entities and individuals;
- in the ordinary course of these activities the Joint Lead Managers and their respective affiliates, and each of their respective officers, employees and contractors may at any time make or hold long or short positions and investments, as well as actively trade or effect transactions in debt and equity securities (or related derivative securities) and financial products (including bank loans and other obligations) of NEXTDC and its related bodies corporate, as well as of other entities and persons and their affiliates which may or may not be involved in or affected by the transactions arising from or relating to the Entitlement Offer or otherwise have relationships with NEXTDC, in each case for their own account and for the accounts of their customers; and
- in connection with the Entitlement Offer, one or more investors may elect to acquire an economic interest in the New Shares (Economic Interest), instead of subscribing for or acquiring the legal or beneficial interest in those shares. The Joint Lead Managers (or its affiliates) may, for their own respective accounts, write derivative transactions with those investors relating to the New Shares to provide the Economic Interest, or otherwise acquire shares in NEXTDC in connection with the writing of those derivative transactions in the Entitlement Offer and/or the secondary market. As a result of those transactions, the Joint Lead Managers (or its affiliates) may be allocated, subscribe for or acquire New Shares or shares of NEXTDC in the Entitlement Offer and/or the secondary market, including to hedge those derivative transactions, as well as hold long or short positions in those shares. These transactions may, together with other shares in NEXTDC acquired by the Joint Lead Managers (or its affiliates) in connection with their ordinary course sales and trading, principal investing and other activities, result in the Underwriter (or its affiliates) disclosing a substantial holding and earning fee.

FORWARD-LOOKING STATEMENTS

This Presentation contains certain forward-looking statements, including “forward looking statements” within the meaning of Section 27A of the U.S. Securities Act of 1933 (the “U.S. Securities Act”), Section 21E of the United States Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Words such as “believe”, “continue”, “expect”, “forecast”, “estimate”, “intend”, “potential”, “likely”, “project”, “anticipate”, “target”, “guidance”, “should”, “could”, “may”, “will”, “predict”, “plan”, “outlook”, “foresee”, “opinion”, “seek”, “consider”, “aim” or such similar phrases are intended to identify forward looking statements. Similarly, indications of, and guidance on, future earnings and financial position and performance, including NEXTDC’s FY26 guidance, Contracted EBITDA, liquidity, capital expenditure requirements, business performance, project timelines or spend, facility go-live dates, utilisation (including pro forma Forward Order Book as at 31 March 2026) and initial or total facility capacity are also forward-looking statements as are statements regarding market competition, service demand and market outlook, statements regarding NEXTDC’s plans, objectives and strategies, and statements regarding the conduct and outcome of the Entitlement Offer and source and use of funds.

Any forward looking statements, opinions and estimates are based on assumptions and contingencies that are subject to change without notice, are not guarantees of future performance and involve known and unknown risks, uncertainties and other factors, many of which are beyond the control of each member of the NEXTDC Group, the Joint Lead Managers, and each of their respective Beneficiaries and which may cause actual results and outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied in this Presentation or in such statements.

This includes statements about market and industry trends, which are based on interpretations of current market conditions. Refer to the Key Risks section of this Presentation for a summary of certain risk factors that may impact NEXTDC.

Forward looking statements may involve significant elements of subjective judgement and assumptions as to future events that may or may not be correct. Forward-looking statements including projections, guidance on future earnings and estimates, each of which are provided as a general guide only and should not be relied upon as an indication or guarantee of future performance. There can be no assurance that the actual operations, performance, targets or outcomes discussed in this Presentation will not differ materially from these statements and the assumptions on which those statements are based. These statements may assume the success of NEXTDC’s business strategies including following completion of the Entitlement Offer, the success of which may not be realised within the period for which the forward-looking statements have been prepared, or at all. There are usually differences between forecasts and actual results because events and circumstances frequently do not occur as forecast, and these differences may be material at times.

Forward looking statements are provided as a general guide only. No guarantee, representation or warranty, express or implied, is made by any member of the NEXTDC Group, the Joint Lead Managers or each of their respective Beneficiaries as to the accuracy, likelihood of achievement or reasonableness of any forward-looking statements contained in this Presentation.

Investors are strongly cautioned to not place undue reliance on such forward-looking statements, especially in the context of the current and challenging economic, market, climate and supply chain conditions and other uncertainty and disruption, including the conflicts in Ukraine and the Middle East.

KEY RISKS

This section discusses some of the key risks associated with an investment in NEXTDC, together with risks relating to participating in the Entitlement Offer and should not be taken as an exhaustive list of all of the risks associated with NEXTDC and its business, or an investment in NEXTDC.

Investors should be aware that various risks and uncertainties, which may be specific to NEXTDC or of a more general nature (and which may be beyond NEXTDC's control), may impact the future operating and financial performance of NEXTDC and the value of NEXTDC's securities, and you could lose all or part of your investment. Further, additional risks and uncertainties that NEXTDC is unaware of, or that it currently considers to be immaterial, may also adversely impact NEXTDC's future operating and financial performance and the value of NEXTDC's securities. Accordingly, no assurance or guarantee of future performance or profitability is given by NEXTDC in respect of NEXTDC or any investment in NEXTDC's securities.

Before investing in NEXTDC's securities, you should carefully consider these key risks, your personal circumstances, and whether such an investment is suitable for you. Investors should also consider publicly available information in relation to NEXTDC (such as information that is available on the ASX website) and seek professional advice from an appropriately qualified financial adviser before making any investment decision.

Reduction in demand for data centre services

The market for data centres is characterised by technological innovation, industry trends and standards, the frequent introduction of new products, emerging competitors, changing laws (eg data, intellectual property and privacy) as well as evolving customer demands.

There are no assurances that the current level of demand for data centre outsourcing and the provision of co-location cloud services will continue or that existing customers will renew their data centre requirements through NEXTDC at the same level as in prior periods, or at all. In addition, a slowdown in cloud adoption, artificial intelligence ("AI") or a general reversion to dispersed or new computing models could have the effect of lessening demand for traditional data centre services and reduce reliance on third-party providers such as NEXTDC.

A reduction in customer demand or increase in competitive supply could materially and adversely impact NEXTDC's growth outlook, and/or financial position, performance (including a fall in revenue due to NEXTDC having to lower product prices in response to changing customer demand or competitive supply, or retaining excess capacity over a longer period which may impact NEXTDC's return on capital and the subsequent valuation of its data centre facilities) and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Data centre interruptions or outages

NEXTDC's operations depend on the performance, reliability, and availability of its infrastructure and technology platforms to provide its customers with a reliable service. The failure of any of NEXTDC's critical systems, including a breakdown in critical plant, equipment or services, such as the cooling equipment, generators, backup batteries, routers, switches or other equipment, power supply or network connectivity, whether or not within NEXTDC's control, could result in an extended downtime of NEXTDC's systems and hardware, software, as well as service interruptions, data losses, and equipment damage, the occurrence of any of which could significantly disrupt the normal business operations of NEXTDC or its customers and result in reputational damage.

Further, NEXTDC relies on a variety of information technology systems, some of which are developed and maintained by third parties, to manage, secure and deliver services and communicate with its customers. Any failure, discontinuance or a material increase in the price of a supplier's systems or software could impact NEXTDC's services and result in a loss of customers or revenue, reputational damage or a weakening of NEXTDC's competitive position and financial performance.

Although NEXTDC has implemented a range of measures to mitigate the risk of data centre and system interruptions or outages, these safeguards may prove insufficient in some circumstances. Accordingly, no assurance can be given that NEXTDC's risk management measures, including internal controls, technology safeguards, and disaster recovery protocols will be fully effective in preventing or mitigating all failures, outages, interruptions, or instances of physical security breaches or other unauthorised access to NEXTDC's operational sites and critical technology platforms, infrastructure, or services, including those managed by third parties.

Consequently, NEXTDC's data centres remain exposed to potential interruptions or outages arising from a variety of factors which include, but are not limited to, power or fibre network issues, disconnection or loss of critical utilities, human error, equipment malfunctions, hardware or software failures, network or telecommunication disruptions, natural disasters, extreme weather events and prolonged extreme temperatures, cyber threats and other security breaches (including physical security incidences, cyber-attacks and computer viruses), terrorism, and the ongoing impacts of climate change. Many of these factors are outside NEXTDC's control, and whether caused by malicious activity or inadvertent error, could lead to significant or sustained business interruption, loss of customers, breaches of certain service level contractual obligations owed to its customers, breaches of legal or regulatory obligations (including privacy laws), and exposure to liability, fines or financial claims. These consequences may not be fully covered by NEXTDC's insurance policies, and could result in reputational damage, erosion of competitive position, and material adverse impacts on NEXTDC's financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities. In some circumstances, claims for loss or damages may exceed the amounts recoverable from third-party providers or insurers, further impacting NEXTDC's financial position.

Development of data centres

NEXTDC is involved in the development of data centres, including new data centres as well as the expansion (including to densify and optimise), refurbishment (including ongoing fit out) or upgrade of new or existing data centres. NEXTDC's data centre developments and projects are subject to a range of material risks, including:

- limitations in obtaining reliable access to the electricity power grid or water infrastructure or supply, such as moratoriums or allocation constraints, which may materially restrict new connections for data centres;
- regulatory approvals (including planning, environmental and key utilities or infrastructure consents and approvals) are not obtained or not received when needed, or are issued with adverse terms or at a materially later date than anticipated, or are not complied with as required, in each case impacting project feasibility;
- escalation of development or other capital costs, including construction, fit-out, and commissioning beyond budget projections, together with unforeseen delays;
- project or construction delays driven by factors outside NEXTDC's control, including regulatory change, shortages in skilled labour and potential industrial disputes, adverse weather, or disruption to site access;
- delays or disruptions in the supply chain for critical equipment and infrastructure such as chillers, generators, fibre connectivity, and other components;
- delays or disruptions to physical security or safety management in the development process, including when such activities are conducted in proximity to, or impact, operational data centre environments;

- non-performance or breach of contract by contractors or sub-contractors, impacting timeline and cost exposures;
- obligations to pay penalties or liquidated damages to customers for the late delivery of data centre capacity; and
- the availability of project financing and the scope of insurance coverage, in each case on commercially acceptable terms or at all.

Material failures or significant delays in any major development such as those at M2, M3, M4, S3, S4, S5, S7, TK1 or KL1 or a series of developments, may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Supply and pricing of electricity

NEXTDC is dependent on reliable access to electricity, sourced through third parties, infrastructure networks, government authorities, and global suppliers, to maintain and operate its data centres. The continued proliferation of data centres combined with the energy-intensive nature of AI-ready and hyperscale facilities substantially increases the risk that electricity grids in relevant markets may fail to provide adequate supply or redundancy over the long term, particularly during periods of rapid demand growth or as a result of the transition to renewable sources. Any power outages, shortages, capacity constraints, delayed or restricted grid connections (including as a result of any delay in obtaining, or conditions attaching to, relevant regulatory or other approvals, or delays associated with the development of renewable or other sources of electrical power and associated transmission infrastructure), or material increases in electricity costs (including the imposition of additional transmission or other levies) could adversely impact NEXTDC's business operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities. This risk is compounded by the evolving politicisation of energy markets, the transition to renewable energy, and competition for grid access.

There is no guarantee that insurance coverage (eg for business interruption caused from power outages, shortages or capacity constraints) will or may be available in the future either at all or on commercially acceptable terms to NEXTDC, and/or may be adequate to cover potential financial exposures, in each case for one or more of these circumstances.

There is no assurance that third parties will consistently deliver stable, sufficient electricity or invest in the infrastructure required to meet NEXTDC's evolving requirements, especially as regulations, reliability standards, and emissions targets change. The shift to renewables is projected to increase outage risk and grid management complexity, potentially increasing the frequency of service disruptions or delay delivery of additional capacity. Government and utility providers may also impose burdensome or onerous conditions, regulatory constraints, or costs on electricity provision or grid connections, including greenhouse gas regulation and energy transition policy interventions, either generally, on data centre operators or NEXTDC specifically. These conditions may impact project viability, timelines and cost structures for NEXTDC.

Access to power and the electricity grid remains a critical constraint for site acquisition and expansion, particularly for data centres specifically designed for AI workloads or other high-density applications, which may require significantly increased capacity. Competition for industrial-zoned land and grid resources from other sectors further compounds this risk.

While NEXTDC's data centres are equipped with backup power generation systems, these arrangements may not be sufficient to provide extended operational continuity during prolonged outages or grid instability events. NEXTDC may also be exposed to increased energy and emissions costs, which may not be able to be passed through to customers in full, adversely impacting NEXTDC's margins, competitiveness, and the value of its securities.

Availability of other utilities

NEXTDC and its customers rely on third-party providers for the ongoing supply of utilities to its data centres (including water and diesel fuel). There is no guarantee that the relevant third-party suppliers will continue their business with NEXTDC in the future or be able to consistently provide sufficient levels of utilities and services to NEXTDC on commercially acceptable terms.

In particular, NEXTDC's reliance on secure and high-quality water for data centre cooling exposes the business to operational, regulatory, and reputational risks. Climate change, drought, or changes in local water allocations could increase costs, constrain capacity, or disrupt operations. Utility companies or governmental agencies may impose more onerous conditions or requirements on water-related approvals, which may result in substantial increases to NEXTDC's operating costs. Any such conditions, requirements or costs may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

NEXTDC is also reliant on a regular supply of diesel fuel to supply utilities to its data centres. The current conflict involving Iran and the Strait of Hormuz may result in a shortage of diesel fuel in Australia, leading to higher costs being payable by NEXTDC for diesel fuel or an inability to access sufficient levels of diesel fuel at all. This in turn may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operating costs and operations, which in turn may negatively impact its financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Availability of network connectivity

NEXTDC's ability to attract and retain customers depends substantially on the availability and reliability of telecommunications carriers' fibre networks servicing its data centres. NEXTDC's operations and financial performance are directly influenced by the capacity and integrity of these carrier networks.

The construction and maintenance of a sophisticated and redundant fibre network connecting multiple carrier facilities to NEXTDC's data centres is a complex process, largely contingent on factors beyond NEXTDC's control. These include compliance with regulatory requirements and the availability of skilled construction resources. Any failure to establish or maintain a highly diverse, robust, and redundant connectivity network whether through delay, disruption, disconnection, or malfunction could materially impair NEXTDC's operational capabilities.

Furthermore, hardware or fibre failures on any connected network may result in significant connectivity losses, which could adversely impact NEXTDC's ability to secure or maintain customer relationships.

Collectively, these risks could have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Strategic risk and international expansion

NEXTDC has adopted a growth strategy which the Entitlement Offer is intended to support. There is a risk that NEXTDC fails to execute its chosen growth strategy effectively or within a timely manner. This may be as a result of factors within or outside NEXTDC's control. A failure to successfully execute NEXTDC's strategic objectives may result in it not achieving the anticipated benefits. This may adversely impact NEXTDC's operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Part of NEXTDC's growth strategy is to continue expanding its international presence. Any further international expansion will require significant management focus and resources, with the success of any expansion efforts depending on various factors, including NEXTDC's ability to secure key customer relationships, gain market insights and knowledge as well as hire and retain skilled employees.

There is also a risk that NEXTDC may fail to fully or adequately understand, comply with or account for, differing laws, regulations and business customs in international jurisdictions (including new or existing tariff requirements), which can increase operational risks for companies like NEXTDC. The political climate in certain foreign jurisdictions may also be volatile, and changes in government policies and regulations, international conflicts and global economic factors can all impact the business environment and investment climate.

Collectively, the occurrence of any of these risks (including a failure by NEXTDC to comply with any international laws, regulations and practices) may interrupt or adversely impact various parts of NEXTDC's business and may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Supply chain risk

NEXTDC's operations are dependent on the coordinated supply of hardware, software, equipment, services, utilities (including diesel fuel) and infrastructure sourced from a diverse range of suppliers. These supply chains are exposed to risks including disruption due to geopolitical instability and international conflicts, shipping constraints and route redirecting, price volatility, technological obsolescence, constrained availability, and the risk of substitution by alternative products or vendors. In recent years, prolonged lead times and delays for critical equipment such as generators, chillers, power and cooling systems have challenged project delivery, driven up construction and operating costs, and elevated risks that timelines may be materially impacted.

Compounding pressures in the global supply chain including geopolitical instability, trade restrictions, regulatory changes, climate events, and skilled labour shortages pose a risk to NEXTDC's operational outcomes and financial performance. Disruption at any point in the supply or logistics chain can have follow-on effects across multiple projects causing delays, triggering late delivery penalties and cost escalation, and on existing data centre sites which, in each case, could result in a materially adverse impact to NEXTDC's operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects, and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Counterparty and customer risk

NEXTDC is exposed to counterparty risk and is subject to certain contractual obligations. Insolvency, a decline in creditworthiness, financial distress, changing market conditions, non-performance, termination (including as a result of a failure by NEXTDC or the relevant counterparty to satisfy any applicable conditions precedent (including obtaining any applicable regulatory consents from, for example, the Foreign Investment Review Board (FIRB) or the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC))) or legal action by counterparties or NEXTDC, or regulatory action by a relevant regulatory authority, may result in amounts owed being unrecoverable, extensive litigation, customer dissatisfaction or otherwise which, in each case, could result in a material adverse financial or operational impact on NEXTDC. A dynamic legislative and regulatory environment for the use of data centres by Australian and overseas based customers, including the advancement and deployment of AI, may compound the challenges faced by customers and impact their businesses and deployment strategies which may precipitate the termination of their contracts with NEXTDC or a decision not to renew them.

The loss of a key or prospective customer or supplier, the inability to renew customer or supplier contracts on similar or more favourable terms or the inability of NEXTDC to attract new customers or suppliers may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

The long sales cycle for data centre products (typically resulting from extensive customer due diligence and negotiations) could also have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC. In this context there is a risk that NEXTDC may invest significant time and resources in pursuits that generate no revenue and take time away from sourcing other potential customers, which may have an adverse impact on its financial position and performance.

Termination of key customer contracts	A key driver of the success of NEXTDC's business is its ability to retain and grow existing customer relationships and develop new customer relationships. There is no guarantee that these relationships will continue or, if they do continue, that these relationships will be successful. Whilst the majority of NEXTDC's customer contracts are on NEXTDC's standard terms and conditions, the majority of NEXTDC's top customer contracts are based on highly negotiated terms. This means that the legal terms which govern the relevant arrangements may differ significantly from customer to customer (including in relation to any applicable conditions precedent and termination events). Some of these material customer contracts to which NEXTDC is a party contain provisions which may include regulatory and other conditions precedent (which may require NEXTDC or the relevant customer to obtain relevant approvals from, for example, FIRB or the ACCC), and give the customer a right to terminate the contract in certain circumstances (including for convenience or, for example, as a result of the failure to satisfy any applicable conditions precedent or the occurrence of an event of default, material adverse change or failure to obtain counterparty consent to a change in control of NEXTDC or any of its controlled entities (in each case, as applicable)). The breach, termination or non-renewal of any material customer contract may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities. As NEXTDC has a level of customer concentration, this risk may be exacerbated to the extent that one or both of the Company's top two customers (which accounted for a total of 47% of FY25 revenues) were to either terminate or not renew their contracts upon expiry. However, the probability of the occurrence of either of these customers terminating or not renewing all of their contracts with NEXTDC is considered to be unlikely on the basis that they each have a number of diverse contracts of different duration and at different data centre sites.
Lease risk	NEXTDC leases certain of its properties (including C1, S2 and TK1) from third parties. Any breach, non-renewal or termination (including as a result of the failure to satisfy any applicable conditions precedent (eg a requirement to obtain FIRB or ACCC approval) or the occurrence of an event of default or failure to obtain counterparty consent to a change in control of NEXTDC or any of its controlled entities (in each case, as applicable) of these leases by NEXTDC or the relevant counterparty could have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC and its operations as there is a risk that NEXTDC may not be able to secure appropriate lease extensions or replacement sites on commercially acceptable terms. NEXTDC's ability to secure lease renewals may be influenced by a number of factors, including the supply of appropriate sites in the market. Lease renewals may also be impacted by environmental, social and governance ("ESG") considerations, including the ESG performance of the relevant sites and the expectations of customers as they seek to manage their own emissions and resource usage profiles. Due to the nature and size of the sites NEXTDC requires to operate its business, NEXTDC may need to accept less favourable or more onerous terms (including increased rent) than the prevailing market terms at the time. Any failure to secure appropriate sites on commercially acceptable terms may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.
Adverse implications of competitive dynamics	NEXTDC competes against other local and global data centre owners and operators and new market entrants, as well as alternative business models such as traditional on-premises solutions. Further, hyperscalers and other cloud service providers have continued to grow in size and market share, with many developing their own data centres in addition to relying on third-party providers such as NEXTDC. An increasing use of self-built data centres has the potential to reduce demand for data centre services from third-party providers such as NEXTDC.

An increasing use of self-built data centres has the potential to reduce demand for data centre services from third party providers such as NEXTDC. There is also a risk that NEXTDC may compete less effectively against its competitors in the future, causing it to lose market share and the ability to develop or secure new customers. These factors, if and to the extent they occur, could lead to decreased revenue and profits for NEXTDC, and may have an adverse impact on NEXTDC's financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Similarly, if NEXTDC's competitors' offerings are or become perceived as superior (including in relation to their relative ESG profile and technological advancements), or they can be offered at a lower price, NEXTDC may be impacted by pricing pressures that could adversely impact its ability to generate revenue. Accordingly, the success of NEXTDC depends, in part, on its ability to continually innovate and keep up to date with the latest technological, industry, regulatory and market trends. It also depends on its ability to efficiently integrate new technologies and processes into its current product and service offerings, and efficiently upgrade, change or evolve its data centre infrastructure and services to meet customer needs. To the extent that NEXTDC is unable to do this, it may result in customer attrition, which in turn could have an adverse impact on its financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

See also 'Reduction in demand for data centre services', above.

Loss of key personnel

NEXTDC's operations and strategic execution are dependent on the ongoing contribution of key executives, directors, and critical personnel. The availability of appropriately skilled leaders and staff, in sufficient numbers, is vital to supporting NEXTDC's growth and performance objectives. The unexpected retirement, resignation, or departure of key management, executive team members, or other specialist personnel could cause disruption to business operations, loss of knowledge, and risks to established customer relationships, particularly where individuals hold critical expertise or lead major workstreams. The ability to attract and retain talent is further challenged by a sector-wide tightening in the labour market, with intense competition for skilled talent placing upward pressure on recruitment, retention, and remuneration practices. Although NEXTDC has strategies and initiatives in place to address talent retention, succession, and workforce renewal, there is no guarantee these measures will always be effective. High turnover rates, difficulties recruiting suitably qualified staff, or failure to retain personnel may adversely impact NEXTDC's reputation, operational continuity, and its financial performance.

Physical and cyber security incidents, breaches of data privacy regulations and confidentiality obligations

NEXTDC or its suppliers may continue to be the target of malicious actors, cyberattacks, computer viruses, malicious code, phishing attacks or information security breaches that could result in the unauthorised release, gathering, monitoring, misuse, loss or destruction of confidential, proprietary and other information of NEXTDC, its employees and customers, or otherwise disrupt NEXTDC, one or more of its data centres, its operating systems, or its customers' or other third parties' business operations. In this context, there is a risk that the measures taken by NEXTDC or its suppliers may not be sufficient to detect or prevent physical or other breaches of its data centres and other operational offices and facilities, including such unauthorised access or disclosure.

Accordingly, there is a risk that any data security breaches or NEXTDC's failure to protect confidential information or systems could, in each case, result in potential enforcement action and monetary fines from data protection authorities, litigation by customers, termination of customer contracts, potential indemnity obligations and potential remediation costs (offering credit monitoring services, for example), which could materially impact NEXTDC's financial and operating performance and financial position.

The occurrence of such security breaches or incidents, or the perception that one has occurred, could also result in a loss of customer confidence in the security of NEXTDC's data centres or damage to the NEXTDC brand and NEXTDC's reputation, reduce the demand for NEXTDC's data centres, disrupt normal business operations, and require NEXTDC to allocate material resources to investigate or correct the breach and prevent future security breaches and incidents. There can be no assurance that NEXTDC will not suffer productivity and revenue losses in the future as a result of such malicious activities, and such losses may adversely impact NEXTDC's business, operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

As the techniques used by malicious actors to obtain unauthorised access to systems and data continue to evolve, NEXTDC may be unable to anticipate attempted security breaches or attacks as they may be dynamic in nature, or implement adequate or effective measures to prevent or minimise disruptions that may be caused by all physical and cyber threats because the techniques used can be highly sophisticated and those perpetrating the attacks may be well resourced. The potential for physical or cyber security breaches may increase as NEXTDC grows its business and expands its profile as a vendor of cloud-based applications and the cloud functionality of its platform, including as the volume of data NEXTDC hosts in the cloud, the number of data centres and the number of users that have access to its systems increases. There is no guarantee that NEXTDC will be able to prevent or rectify any such security breaches or incidents, either physical or cyber, or that insurance will be adequate to cover potential financial exposures for one or more of these circumstances. There is a risk that the successful assertion of one or more large claims against such cover could compromise the availability and cost of available insurance cover in the future. Material physical or cyber security or other data breaches may result in a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Future acquisitions and investments

From time to time, NEXTDC evaluates growth-driven initiatives, including potential acquisitions of new data centre sites, businesses, or investments, both domestically and internationally. Such transactions may temporarily disrupt NEXTDC's operations and divert management attention. There can be no assurance that suitable acquisition or investment opportunities will be identified, executed, or successfully completed. Acquisitions also carry inherent risks associated with the integration of operations, systems, and personnel, which may result in disruption, increased complexity, or loss of organisational focus. Not every acquisition or investment undertaken by NEXTDC may deliver favourable outcomes for future operational or financial performance. Failure to uncover material due diligence issues, or ineffective management and integration of acquired assets, may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

People and safety risk, and workplace, health and safety

Employees of NEXTDC are at risk of workplace accidents and incidents (be they physical or otherwise). If an employee is injured or some other event or circumstance occurs in the course of their employment giving rise to a claim, NEXTDC may be subject to investigations and may be found liable for penalties or damages, including under the various occupational health and safety regulations throughout the regions in which it operates (which may or may not be covered by insurance).

There can be no assurance that accidents or workplace incidents will not occur and result in injuries to, or impact, NEXTDC's personnel or third parties. Such events may result in costs (including in relation to any associated litigation or investigation) and fines and may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Operational risk, fraudulent or inappropriate conduct	Operational risk includes the risk of loss resulting from inadequate or failed internal processes, people or systems (including security and information security systems), or from external events. The operation of NEXTDC’s data centres is reliant on the technical and operational resilience of its infrastructure. NEXTDC is exposed to a variety of risks including those arising from physical site or centre security lapses or failures, and failures in operational integrity including but not limited to process errors, technology failures, customer activities, staff levels and skills, workplace safety, compliance breaches, business continuity, crisis management or data storage issues or failures, and processing or data management errors. Certain customers may also terminate the services of NEXTDC at any time, for any reason, or a regulatory investigation or review may adversely impact NEXTDC’s ability to conduct its operations in an efficient and cost-effective manner, which may result in a significant increase in unplanned or unexpected operational expense for NEXTDC. If NEXTDC’s data centres suffer a serious incident, its operations and reputation may be negatively impacted. Such an event may result in customer losses, erode confidence in NEXTDC’s services, enliven termination rights under existing customer contracts, hinder customer acquisition and retention, and expose NEXTDC to financial obligations for breaching service level commitments or broader liabilities for contractual breaches. Because NEXTDC’s ability to attract and retain customers depends on the reliability of its service, even minor operational interruptions could harm its reputation and result in financial penalties. NEXTDC has also started to implement the use of certain AI tools within its business. AI is an emerging technology, and NEXTDC cannot guarantee that its use of AI will increase efficiency or provide other operational benefits. Further, NEXTDC’s use of AI could present certain risks. For example, the use of AI has the potential to result in bias, miscalculations, data errors and other unintended consequences, and may unintentionally compromise confidential or sensitive information, put NEXTDC’s intellectual property at risk, or subject NEXTDC to claims related to data privacy management or intellectual property infringement. See also ‘Physical and cyber security incidents, breaches of data privacy regulations and confidentiality obligations’, above. Each of these risks may ultimately adversely impact NEXTDC’s operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities. There is also a risk that the business may be subject to fraudulent or inappropriate behaviour from time to time – either from those within, or external to, the business. Depending on its scope and severity, any such behaviour may have an adverse impact on NEXTDC’s operations, reputation, and/or financial position or performance. Any resulting harm or loss to NEXTDC caused by such behaviour may or may not be covered by insurance.
Financial risk	There is a risk that NEXTDC may fail to achieve its financial (including contracting) objectives, or manage its financial risks, from time to time which may, in turn, have a material adverse impact on its financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities. This may be as a result of factors within or outside NEXTDC’s control.
Change management	There is a risk that the implementation of changes to NEXTDC’s business, operations and processes, supplier engagements, governance, personnel and culture from time to time may be disruptive, protracted, complex and costly, and may result in unexpected challenges and issues, and the diverting of management time, effort and attention. There is also a risk that the anticipated benefits of certain changes (including the estimated contribution of those changes to NEXTDC’s operating performance) may be less than anticipated, estimated or required.

Legal and regulatory compliance

NEXTDC must comply with a range of laws, regulations and industry standards in each jurisdiction in which it operates including, but not limited to, privacy laws, fair trade laws, anti-bribery and corruption legislation, sanctions legislation, consumer protection laws, employment laws and taxation laws (amongst others). Failure by NEXTDC to comply with those laws, regulations and industry standards may result in litigation, regulatory enquiry or investigation, fines and penalties, or significant reputational damage which could have an adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

NEXTDC may also become subject to new laws, regulations or industry standards, or new or changed interpretations of existing laws, regulations or industry standards, stricter enforcement, or enhanced supervisory expectations regarding the management of any associated legal and regulatory compliance risks. New or amended laws, regulations or industry standards, or new or changed interpretations of existing laws, regulations or industry standards could restrict NEXTDC's ability to provide its services, result in changes to NEXTDC's business model, reduce NEXTDC's profit margins or make compliance more difficult or expensive, any of which may have an adverse impact on NEXTDC's business, operations, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

A breach of any laws, regulations or industry standards may lead to prosecution, investigations and inquiries and result in the imposition of conditions, fines and penalties or other sanctions on NEXTDC, which could have an adverse impact on NEXTDC's business, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities. Any deterioration in NEXTDC's regulatory compliance performance may adversely impact NEXTDC's reputation and standing in the industry, and its ability to retain and win contracts with existing and new customers.

Adverse implications from litigation and disputes

NEXTDC may in the ordinary course of business become involved in litigation, arbitration and disputes, for example with its suppliers, customers or other contractual counterparties which could involve significant economic costs and damage to relationships with relevant stakeholders.

NEXTDC's involvement in any litigation, arbitration or dispute or any associated protracted settlement negotiations may disrupt NEXTDC's business operations, or cause NEXTDC to incur significant legal costs and may divert management's attention. Any such events may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Environmental laws and regulations

National and local environmental laws and regulations may impact NEXTDC's operations and may result in penalties and other liabilities if breached.

NEXTDC's operations are subject to various environmental laws, including those relating to air pollution control, water pollution control, waste disposal, noise pollution control, the use of electrical back-up infrastructure, and the storage, handling and disposal of hazardous or toxic materials or substances. Under these laws, an owner or occupier of real property may be subject to liability, including a fine or imprisonment for breach of these laws. The discharge, release or disposal of air, soil or water pollutants without a valid permit or the improper use, storage or handling of hazardous or toxic materials or substances may expose NEXTDC to liability or materially adversely impact its operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

The environmental impact of data centres has recently been a focus of governments and regulators, leading to the introduction of new legislation in relation to energy usage and a carbon reduction scheme. Global environmental regulations are expected to continue to change and evolve rapidly and at times inconsistently and may impose new or unexpected costs on NEXTDC and its operations. In particular, inaccurate emissions reporting or misalignment with recognised frameworks may result in significant costs and regulatory, reputational and commercial risks for NEXTDC. Further, the inadequate delineation of operational control boundaries or evolving assurance expectations could also undermine stakeholder confidence amidst NEXTDC's global expansion.

NEXTDC's businesses currently incur costs to comply with these environmental laws and regulations, and changes to such laws and regulations, including changes to operating licence conditions, could result in penalties and other liabilities, which may have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Climate change risk

NEXTDC, its customers and suppliers, may be adversely impacted by the physical risks (including possibility of destruction or disruption to human life, physical and natural capital) and socioeconomic impacts (including impacts to liveability, food systems and infrastructure assets) of climate change. This may directly impact NEXTDC and its customers through damage to property, reduced asset values, insurance risk and business disruption and may have an adverse impact on NEXTDC's financial position and performance. Failure of NEXTDC to effectively assess and respond to these risks or to be perceived as failing to do so, could adversely impact NEXTDC's reputation which in turn could adversely impact NEXTDC's financial performance.

In addition, natural disasters as a result of climate change including (but not limited to) cyclones, floods and earthquakes, and the economic and financial market implications of those disasters on domestic and global market conditions could adversely impact NEXTDC's financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

ESG expectations from customers and other stakeholders

Energy performance remains a key operational and cost risk for NEXTDC, with rising customer demand increasing total energy consumption. There is a possibility that, although conventional energy will remain important in addressing power reliability by stabilising the variability of renewable generation, growing customer pressure to improve ESG outcomes, including reducing greenhouse gas emissions, will heighten expectations that NEXTDC procure renewable energy for its data centres or obtain sufficient carbon credits to offset emissions from electricity consumption.

NEXTDC may be unable to directly secure adequate renewable energy supply or acquire enough large-scale generation certificates or carbon credits to meet these expectations, which could impair its ability to attract and retain data centre customers. Further, a failure to maintain optimal facility design, engineering, and operational controls could result in higher operating costs, missed efficiency targets and diminished competitiveness.

As nature-related disclosure and stakeholder expectations evolve, customers may also increasingly prefer assets with lower water intensity. This may create a risk if NEXTDC's data centres do not maintain water efficiency levels that align with customer requirements or if its competitors manage to do so more efficiently. If NEXTDC fails to meet customer obligations or demands regarding the ESG profile of its data centres (including due to power supply constraints), its reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects could be materially and adversely impacted.

Brand reputation	NEXTDC's reputation may be impacted by the conduct of NEXTDC, its directors, employees or shareholders, or other third parties, including business partners, technology providers, and customers, as well as by unforeseen issues or events. Any deterioration in NEXTDC's reputation could result in existing customers ceasing doing business with NEXTDC, hinder the attraction of new customers, and undermine NEXTDC's competitive position. Any of these may adversely impact NEXTDC's financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.
Insurance coverage	NEXTDC maintains insurance coverage that it believes is appropriate and prudent to protect against material operating, business and other risks, having regard to the scope and scale of its activities. However, not all risks are insured or insurable. NEXTDC cannot be certain that its current level of insurance is adequate, or that adequate insurance coverage for potential losses and liabilities will be available in the future on commercially acceptable terms or at all. There is also a risk that the occurrence of certain events (including material claims relating to property damage, cyber incidents or business interruption, changes in market conditions (eg as a result of catastrophic losses in the insurance industry), or business changes (eg the expansion of, or changes to, NEXTDC's asset or customer base, or operations, or entry into a high-risk markets)) may result in material increases to the level of NEXTDC's insurance premiums or exclusions from its insurance policies. If NEXTDC experiences a loss in the future or if NEXTDC's third-party providers fail to perform their obligations and/or its third-party insurance cover (including directors and officers insurance and public liability insurance) either does not cover or is insufficient for a particular matter or group of related matters, the proceeds of the applicable insurance policies, if any, may not be adequate to cover replacement costs, lost revenues, increased expenses, or liabilities to third parties. Any resultant net loss to NEXTDC could have a material adverse impact on NEXTDC's operations, reputation, and/or financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.
Impact of international conflict and general economic conditions	NEXTDC's operating and financial performance may be impacted by factors such as macroeconomic conditions, capital market dynamics, regulatory changes, global conflicts, natural disasters, and pandemics. Adverse shifts in these areas, such as rising inflation, interest rates, or geopolitical tensions may negatively impact NEXTDC's financial results, operating performance, and the value of its securities. These risks may be heightened by current international conflicts (eg in the Middle East and Ukraine) and persistent economic uncertainty. The potential impacts of these events or occurrences on, and their possible outcomes for, NEXTDC include: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• fluctuation in the currency markets and exchange rates leading to reduced margins from overseas operations;• a slowdown of the international economy, leading to a decrease in demand for NEXTDC's products and services;• counterparty insolvency, or non-performance or claims under existing contractual arrangements; and• fluctuations in the pricing of commodity, utilities and energy markets, and disruptions to international trade resulting from international conflicts (eg international fuel supply from the Middle East) and policies developed by governments in response to geopolitical tensions or otherwise (including the deployment of specific and generalised tariffs, sanctions or other supply or trade restrictions). The nature and consequences of any such factors are difficult to predict and there can be no guarantee that NEXTDC could respond effectively. Any such event and/or the effectiveness of NEXTDC's response could adversely impact NEXTDC's financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Investment in equity capital

Investments in equity capital carry general risks. The trading price of NEXTDC's securities on ASX may fluctuate in line with broader market movements or in response to specific circumstances, which may result in the market price being higher or lower than the Offer Price (as applicable). Some factors which may influence the market price of NEXTDC's securities include:

- the impact of global conflict and geopolitical unrest (eg the current conflict and resulting instability in the Middle East and Ukraine), including with respect to consumer sentiment, supply chains and international trade;
- Australian and international general economic conditions (including inflation rates, the level of economic activity, interest rates and currency exchange rates), changes in government policy, changes in regulatory policy, the expressed views of regulators, investor sentiment and general market movements, which may or may not have an impact on NEXTDC's actual operating performance;
- operating results that vary from the expectations of securities analysts and investors, or changes in the expectations as to NEXTDC's future financial performance, including financial estimates or projections by securities analysts and investors;
- changes in the market valuations of other data centre or information technology institutions;
- the announcement of acquisitions, strategic partnerships, joint ventures or capital commitments by NEXTDC or its competitors;
- changes in the market price of ordinary shares and/or other securities or other equity securities issued by NEXTDC or by other issuers, or changes in the supply of equity securities issued by NEXTDC or by other issuers;
- changes in laws, regulations and regulatory policy;
- other major Australian and international events such as hostilities and tensions, acts of terrorism and the impact of pandemics or epidemics (including the measures taken to control their spread); and
- other events set out above in the key risks associated with NEXTDC's business.

Equity capital markets have historically and may in the future be subject to significant volatility. No assurance can be given that NEXTDC's securities will trade at or above the Offer Price, and none of NEXTDC, its board, the Joint Lead Managers or any other person guarantees the market performance of NEXTDC's securities. It is possible that the price of NEXTDC's securities may trade at a market price below the Offer Price as a result of these and other factors in the future.

Underwriting risks

NEXTDC has entered into an Underwriting Agreement under which the Joint Lead Managers have agreed to fully underwrite the Entitlement Offer, subject to the terms and conditions of the Underwriting Agreement. If a Joint Lead Manager terminates its obligations under the Underwriting Agreement, it will not be obliged to fulfil any of its obligations that remain to be fulfilled. Termination of the Underwriting Agreement by 1 or more of the Joint Lead Managers could have a material adverse impact on the amount of proceeds raised under the Entitlement Offer which would impact NEXTDC's ability to expand its data centre development pipeline across Australia and Asia, including site acquisition, planning, design and development activities to progress additional data centre capacity. A summary of the circumstances in which a Joint Lead Manager may terminate its obligations under the Underwriting Agreement is included in the Summary of the Underwriting Agreement section of this Presentation.

Non-participation in the Entitlement Offer	As the Entitlement Offer is non-renounceable, entitlements under the Entitlement Offer cannot be traded on ASX or otherwise transferred. If NEXTDC's shareholders are ineligible to participate in the Entitlement Offer, choose not to participate in the Entitlement Offer, or do not take up their full entitlements under the Entitlement Offer, their percentage shareholding will be diluted, and they will not have an opportunity to realise value for their renounced entitlements.
Foreign exchange	The vast majority of NEXTDC's cash reserves and assets are in Australian dollar (A$) denominated currency. As a result of NEXTDC's continued international expansion, its revenues, expenses and capital costs will increasingly be incurred in foreign currencies, whereas NEXTDC reports in Australian dollars (A$). As a result, NEXTDC will be exposed to an increased level of foreign currency fluctuations, which may adversely impact its operating results, and/or financial position and performance and, therefore, the value of its securities.
Rising interest rates and adverse inflation implications	Rising interest rates and central bank tightening and other challenges to the global economy, such as global shipping constraints and route redirections, higher costs of freight, supply chain issues (including in relation to the supply of fuel), higher energy prices, higher food prices and tightening labour markets are all contributing to rising inflationary pressures on the global economy. As inflation continues to rise and remain elevated, this may result in increases in the prices of key elements of NEXTDC's supply chain, including critical capital equipment, utilities (including diesel fuel) and/or labour costs. NEXTDC is also exposed to interest rate volatility due to the variable rate on its Senior Debt Facilities (defined in 'Availability of funding and service of debt financing risk', below). Accordingly, rising interest rates may have the effect of increasing NEXTDC's borrowing costs (to the extent not already mitigated by interest rate swaps entered into by the company). NEXTDC has a large development pipeline with material capital expenditure that it expects to continue in the medium term in line with its growth expectations. To the extent NEXTDC cannot pass on the impacts of rising interest rates or inflation to its customers, this may adversely impact NEXTDC's operating results, and/or financial position and performance and, therefore, the value of its securities.
Changes in accounting policy	Australian Accounting Standards are issued by the Australian Accounting Standards Board and are not within the control of NEXTDC and its board. Changes to the Australian Accounting Standards, or to their interpretation or application (including as a result of positions adopted by the IFRS Interpretations Committee, the AASB, ASIC or other regulators), or to other pronouncements under the Corporations Act, could impact NEXTDC's reported earnings, revenue recognition, non IFRS financial measures (including Underlying EBITDA and Contracted EBITDA) and financial position from time to time. In particular, there is continuing industry focus on the application of AASB 15 Revenue from Contracts with Customers and AASB 16 Leases to colocation and other data centre arrangements. There is a risk that NEXTDC may in the future be required (or elect) to bifurcate its customer contracts between an identifiable lease component accounted for under AASB 16, with rental income generally recognised on a straight line basis over the lease term and a service component accounted for under AASB 15 and recognised as the related services are provided. Any such change could reclassify amounts currently reported as data centre revenue, alter the timing or pattern of revenue recognition relative to billing utilisation, and impact NEXTDC's reported revenue, Underlying EBITDA, Contracted EBITDA, margins and other reported financial metrics, and may require changes to NEXTDC's accounting systems, contract drafting, internal controls and disclosures.

Taxation risks

Any alteration to the current company income tax rate, or any other change to tax laws, compliance obligations or administrative practice in jurisdictions where NEXTDC or its customers operate that impacts NEXTDC, or the data centre or information technology sector more broadly, could adversely impact NEXTDC's financial position and performance, and shareholder returns.

Likewise, any changes to the current income tax rates applicable to shareholders (including the taxation of dividends), whether they are individuals, trusts or companies, may also impact shareholder returns.

Hybrid Securities

As announced on 7 April 2026, NEXTDC has received a A$1.0 billion binding commitment from La Caisse ("Binding Commitment") and has commenced the Hybrid Securities Offer for A$1 billion. On 20 April 2026, NEXTDC announced that it has increased the Hybrid Securities Offer by A$700 million through a new delayed draw tranche (being the Delayed Draw Series), with La Caisse agreeing to upsize its binding commitment by A$700 million to A$1.7 billion.

The issue of any Hybrid Securities is subject to customary conditions precedent. The outstanding conditions need to be satisfied by 31 May 2026.

The key terms of the Hybrid Securities (including compliance with certain financial covenants, and consequences of the occurrence of a change of control of NEXTDC) are otherwise described in NEXTDC's ASX Announcements on 7 April 2026 titled 'A$1.0 billion Hybrid Securities Offer and La Caisse Commitment' (in relation to the Initial Series) and 20 April 2026 titled 'Record Contracted Utilisation and A$2.2bn Capital Plan' (for the Delayed Draw Series).

There is a risk that NEXTDC may be unable to meet all of its obligations (including in relation to the satisfaction of any relevant conditions precedent) set out in the terms of the Binding Commitment and may incur additional interest or coupon costs in certain circumstances (including on a change of control). If NEXTDC is unable to meet all of its obligations or if the relevant conditions precedent are unable to be satisfied, NEXTDC may need to seek alternative financing arrangements or take other measures to address its expected financial position and operational, financial and liquidity requirements, which, in each case, may be on terms materially less favourable to NEXTDC. This may also arise if the Hybrid Securities are not redeemed following a change of control of NEXTDC. The occurrence of any of these things could have an adverse impact on NEXTDC's financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

Availability of funding, service of debt financing, and liquidity risk

As disclosed by NEXTDC to ASX on 14 August 2025, NEXTDC has entered into additional senior debt facilities totalling A$3.5bn, increasing NEXTDC's total senior debt facilities to A$6.4bn ("Senior Debt Facilities").

The Senior Debt Facilities include a number of undertakings, representations, warranties and covenants in relation to which NEXTDC and various members of the NEXTDC Group must comply (including maintenance financial covenants). There is a risk that NEXTDC may be unable to meet all of its obligations set out in the terms of the Senior Debt Facilities. In particular, if NEXTDC drew down on these facilities and were to breach any of these representations, undertakings or financial covenants, the lenders may seek to cancel the facilities and declare all outstanding amounts immediately due and payable. If that action were to be taken, there is no certainty that NEXTDC would have access to sufficient cash to meet its repayment obligations or be able to refinance the existing debt on commercially acceptable terms. In those circumstances, NEXTDC would need to seek waivers or other forms of accommodation. Alternatively, NEXTDC would need to procure alternative financing arrangements to refinance the debt obligations, which may adversely impact its financial position, performance and prospects and, therefore, the value of its securities.

NEXTDC's ability to refinance its debt on terms acceptable to it at a relevant time in the future, its ability to raise further debt finance on reasonable terms for its business and to pursue opportunities, and its borrowing costs will depend on its relationships with lenders, the willingness of lenders to support NEXTDC (either individually or as part of a syndicate), prevailing market conditions and NEXTDC's future operating performance and reputation. In particular, NEXTDC may incur higher interest rates and/or additional fees and conditions associated with any debt refinancing in the future.

Further, in addition to the points noted above, financial market participants are becoming more conscious of prevailing geopolitical conditions, and increasing their focus on ESG issues, which may impact appetite. Accordingly, in the future, there is no certainty as to the availability of debt facilities or funding, or demand for debt instruments, either at all, on the terms on which those facilities or instruments are currently provided, or on commercially acceptable terms, in each case to NEXTDC. If NEXTDC is unable to raise addition debt finance or refinance its debt obligations, or to do so on reasonable terms in the future, this may have an adverse impact on NEXTDC's financial position and performance.

NEXTDC may also need additional equity in the future, including to fund growth strategies and/or to refinance its existing debt obligations. However, NEXTDC may be unable to access equity funding on commercially acceptable terms, or at all, in the future. If NEXTDC raises additional funds in the future by issuing additional equity there is a risk that some or all of NEXTDC's existing shareholders' percentage shareholdings in NEXTDC may be diluted.

Market liquidity risk

Shareholders who wish to sell their ordinary shares may be unable to do so at an acceptable price, or at all, if insufficient liquidity exists in the market for ordinary shares. NEXTDC does not guarantee the market price or liquidity of its securities (including ordinary shares) and there is a risk that you may lose some or all of the money you invested.

Shareholders are subordinated and unsecured investors

In a winding up of NEXTDC, shareholders' claims will rank after the claims of creditors preferred by law, secured creditors and general creditors. Shareholders' claims will rank equally with claims of holders of all other ordinary shares. If NEXTDC were to be wound up and, after the claims of creditors preferred by law, secured creditors, general creditors and holders of subordinated instruments (including holders of hybrid securities (if any)) are satisfied, there are insufficient assets remaining, you may lose some or all of the money you invested in NEXTDC's securities.

OFFER RESTRICTIONS

SUMMARY OF THE UNDERWRITING AGREEMENT

NEXTDC has entered into an underwriting agreement with the Joint Lead Managers (“Underwriting Agreement”) pursuant to which the Joint Lead Managers have been appointed to act as the joint lead managers, bookrunners and underwriters of the Entitlement Offer and have agreed to fully underwrite the Entitlement Offer, subject to the terms and conditions of the Underwriting Agreement.

The Joint Lead Managers’ obligations under the Underwriting Agreement, including to manage and underwrite the Entitlement Offer, are conditional on certain matters, including (but not limited to) certain Entitlement Offer-related disclosure materials being released within the required timeframes and certain other diligence-related deliverables (including customary certificates, reports, sign-offs and opinions from NEXTDC and its advisors, as applicable) being provided within the required timeframes.

If certain conditions are not satisfied or certain events occur, the Joint Lead Managers may terminate the Underwriting Agreement. Termination of the Underwriting Agreement by all of the Joint Lead Managers would have a material adverse impact on the total amount of proceeds that could be raised under the Entitlement Offer and therefore, on NEXTDC’s ability to invest in capacity to support delivery of NEXTDC’s pro forma Forward Order Book including the 250MW increase in contracted utilisation.

The events which may trigger termination of the Underwriting Agreement include the following, which is not intended to be an exhaustive or complete list:

- (delay to the timetable) there are certain delays in the timetable for the Entitlement Offer without the Joint Lead Managers’ consent;
- (withdrawal) NEXTDC withdraws the Entitlement Offer;
- (certificates) a certificate which is required to be furnished by NEXTDC under the Underwriting Agreement is not furnished when required;

- (listing) ASX announces that NEXTDC’s shares will be delisted, removed from quotation, withdrawn from admission to trading status or suspended from quotation;
- (quotation approval) unconditional approval (or approval conditional only on customary conditions which are acceptable to the Joint Lead Managers, acting reasonably) is refused or not granted to the official quotation of all of the New Shares to be issued under the Institutional Entitlement Offer or New Shares to be issued under the Retail Entitlement Offer by the time required under the Underwriting Agreement;

The ability of a Joint Lead Manager to terminate the Underwriting Agreement in respect of some of the events marked with an (*) above will depend on whether, in the reasonable opinion of that Joint Lead Manager, the event has had, or could reasonably be expected to have, a material adverse effect on the marketing or success of the Entitlement Offer, renders it impracticable to effect acceptances of applications for New Shares or settlement and issue of New Shares, or could reasonably be expected to give rise to a liability for that Joint Lead Manager under the Corporations Act or any other applicable law.

For details of the fees payable to the Joint Lead Managers, see the Appendix 3B released to ASX on the date of this Presentation.

NEXTDC also gives certain representations, warranties and undertakings to the Joint Lead Managers and an indemnity to the Joint Lead Managers and their respective indemnified parties subject to certain carve-outs. As part of these undertakings, NEXTDC has agreed to not, for a prescribed period of time, without the prior consent of the Joint Lead Managers (such consent not to be unreasonably withheld or delayed), conduct any equity security buy-back, scheme of arrangement or allot or agree to allot, or indicate in any way that it will or might, allot or agree to allot any equity securities or subordinated debt securities or other securities (including hybrid, convertible or equity-linked securities) or grant or agree to grant any options in respect of such securities (or do anything economically equivalent to the foregoing), other than subject to certain limited exceptions (including in relation to the Entitlement Offer).

This Presentation constitutes an offering of New Shares only in the Provinces of British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec (each, a “Province” and collectively, the “Provinces”), only to persons to whom New Shares may be lawfully distributed in the Provinces, and only by persons permitted to sell such securities. Furthermore, any resale of New Shares in the Provinces must be made in accordance with applicable Canadian securities laws. While such resale restrictions generally do not apply to a first trade in a security of a foreign, non-Canadian reporting issuer that is made through an exchange or market outside Canada, Canadian purchasers should seek legal advice prior to any resale of New Shares.

NEXTDC as well as its directors and officers may be located outside Canada and, as a result, it may not be possible for purchasers to effect service of process within Canada upon NEXTDC or its directors or officers. All or a substantial portion of the assets of NEXTDC and such persons may be located outside Canada and, as a result, it may not be possible to satisfy a judgment against NEXTDC or such persons in Canada or to enforce a judgment obtained in Canadian courts against NEXTDC or such persons outside Canada.

Statutory rights of action for damages and rescission. Securities legislation in certain Provinces may provide a purchaser with remedies for rescission or damages if an offering memorandum contains a misrepresentation, provided the remedies for rescission or damages are exercised by the purchaser within the time limit prescribed by the securities legislation of the purchaser’s Province. A purchaser may refer to any applicable provision of the securities legislation of the purchaser’s Province for particulars of these rights or consult with a legal adviser.
